Society for the Study of American Women Writers

Triennial Conference

Liminal Spaces, Hybrid Lives

November 4-8, 2015
Sheraton Society Hill
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
The Society for the Study of American Women Writers (SSAWW) was established in 2000 to promote and advance the study of American women writers through research, teaching, and publication. It is the goal of the Society to strengthen relations among persons and institutions both in the United States and internationally who are undertaking such studies, and to broaden knowledge widely among the general public about American women writers. The Society is committed to diversity in the study of American women writers — racial, ethnic, gender, class, sexual orientation, region, and era — as well as of scholars participating in the Society.

Anyone we have omitted to name – many people helped in many ways.

And, especially, we thank all the conference participants and attendees for their dynamic and meaningful contributions to the field of American women writers.
Liminal Spaces, Hybrid Lives

The strength of the society is rooted in the dynamic ideas and research accomplishments of its members, which the 2015 conference continues to facilitate and honor. As in the past, however, the conference also facilitates discussions and conversations around a shared theme.

The terms liminality and hybridity are most familiar in post-colonial contexts; however, they suggest critical concepts that draw on multiple disciplines and privilege inclusion. Often informed by notions of crossing, intersectionality, transition, and transformation, these terms contest exclusionary practices involving class, ethnicity, gender, race, religion, and sex, among other variables. The word “limen,” from which liminality derives, designates threshold. The threshold functions simultaneously as both an obstructive barrier and an enticing opening for the entry into unknown, perhaps unknowable states that invite exploration. Both spatial and temporal, the liminal is a site of in-betweenness enabling non-normative perspectives. It is a site where difference becomes encounter as well as a location that resists assimilation while simultaneously allowing for the dynamic possibilities of fusion that hybridity embraces and articulates.

With the theme of "Liminal Spaces, Hybrid Lives," the 2015 Triennial SSAWW Conference celebrates the multiplicity of American women’s writing across a longstanding literary tradition that continues to be dynamic in contemporary times. The conference theme of liminality and hybridity, and the wide range of implications and meanings that these expansive concepts imply, facilitates a process of encounters, engagements, and conversations within, between, among, and across the rich polyphony that constitutes the creative acts of American women. Thus, through a focus on liminality and hybridity, the 2015 SSAWW presents the varied ways in which women, as critics, dramatists, educators, essayists, journalists, oral storytellers, poets, novelists, short story writers, and practitioners of both older and emerging forms, invent and reinvent the American literary and cultural landscape.

For the 2015 Conference, first time SSAWW conference attendees will have blue markers on their badges if they choose. Please ask for one at Registration. If, as a previous SSAWW conference attendee, you see conference participants with blue markers on their badges, please take a moment to welcome them to the conference and to SSAWW.

Members of the conference organizing committee will have red markers on their badges. Please feel free to approach them for information.

CALL FOR PAPERS FOR A PROPOSED SSAWW EDITED COLLECTION

CALL FOR SENIOR SCHOLAR TO WRITE PREFACE

The Society for the Study of American Women Writers (SSAWW) is seeking abstracts (250 words) for essays (7500-8500 words, excluding notes) on American women writers and liminality for a proposed edited collection. We also seek a senior scholar in the field of American women writers to write the preface to the collection and, if interested, join the team as a co-editor.

The proposed collection builds on the popular CFP on liminality and hybridity for both SSAWW’s panels at the 2015 American Literature Association Conference and for SSAWW’s 2015 triennial conference. The timeline for the selection of essays and submission of the edited collection proposal appears below. Please direct questions about this new publication initiative to: ssawwcollection@gmail.com.

Essay Abstracts: DUE December 10, 2015

Submit your 250-word abstract and 1 page CV to: ssawwcollection@gmail.com. In the subject line of the email and on your abstract, please note whether your proposed essay primarily focuses on (1) American women writers from the early period, (2) the 19th century, or (3) the 20th/21st century. All are welcome to submit abstracts; accepted authors should be members of SSAWW.

Senior Scholar: DUE December 10, 2015

Submit a letter of interest (250 words) that highlights your qualifications, interest, and preferred level of involvement (serve as co-editor and/or write preface) and a current CV to: ssawwcollection@gmail.com. In the subject line of the email please include the words “Senior Scholar.” The selected senior scholar should be a member of SSAWW.

Call available here: https://call-for-papers.sas.upenn.edu/node/63048

Proposed Content Distribution

- Early American (Pre- and Colonial America) Women Writers (3-4 essays)
- 19th-Century American Women Writers (3-4 essays)
- 20th/21-Century American Women Writers (3-4 essays)

Timeline

- Abstracts and Senior Scholar application due Dec. 10, 2015
- Review abstracts and send out notifications by Jan. 15, 2016
- Complete essays due June 1, 2016
- Proposal submission to publisher August 2016
